Odom Issues Stop Sale on Vietnamese Seafood

The Department of Agriculture and Forestry has placed a stop sale on 785,405 pounds of Vietnamese seafood until it can be tested for a substance outlawed in food production, Commissioner of Agriculture and Forestry Bob Odom said.

The U.S. Food and Drug Administration notified the Department of Agriculture and Forestry of the presence of the substance in some fish and asked the department for assistance.

"Some of the basa contains the antibiotic fluoroquinolone that the FDA has established a zero-tolerance policy for in food," Odom said. "Our Agro-Consumer Services inspectors are locating the product now and will put a stop sale on it until the companies can have it tested in an approved laboratory showing it is free from contamination."

The department is also conducting regulatory sampling and testing in its Baton Rouge lab on the LSU campus.

"When a zero-tolerance policy is there, it has to be enforced and that's what we're doing," Odom said. "The health of our consumers is critical to food producers in the United States and it needs to be that way in countries who expect us to buy and eat their food. We cannot put regulations and constraints on our producers and then allow imported food to violate those regulations. I am glad the FDA is taking action and we'll work with them until all the affected product is identified and taken off the market."

"We're not trying to disrupt business or treat anyone unfairly, we are enforcing the law. There is a reason the FDA has a zero-tolerance for this antibiotic and it's to protect you and me and our children and grandchildren."

The antibiotic is banned in the U.S., Canada and Europe because of concern that the germs the antibiotic is designed to fight will become resistant, making it less effective and ultimately ineffective when given directly to humans to fight infections.

Basa also has been found and banned in Alabama and Mississippi. In addition, U.S. Rep. Mike Ross, D. Ark., is asking the FDA for a temporary nationwide ban on basa because of the fluoroquinolone contamination.

Odom said his inspectors are also sampling and testing other Vietnamese seafood products for fluoroquinolones.

Vietnamese basa used to be sold in Louisiana as catfish until in 2002 the state Legislature, at the urging of catfish farmers and Odom, forced distributors and retailers to use the proper name for the fish. Vietnamese basa is not from the same family and does not look anything like U.S. catfish in the wild. It had always been known as basa or tra in Vietnam until they began shipping it to the United States and the name was changed from basa to catfish.

Basa and catfish were in the news recently as groups performed "taste test" research in Mississippi and Baton Rouge.

"We are concerned and disappointed to see that the basa fish used in a taste test in Baton Rouge in early August could have contained a chemical banned by the federal government for use in food-producing animals," Odom said.

Did You Know:

September marks the annual celebration of national rice month and national honey month.

According to the latest figures from the Louisiana Agricultural Statistics Service, rice farmers can look forward to positive results following this season's harvest.

Although rice acreage for harvest is forecast to be 8,000 acres less than in 2004, production is expected to increase 5 percent from 2004 to 29.9 million hundredweight in 2005. Yield per acre is forecast at 5,700 pounds, up 350 pounds per acre from last year. If this yield forecast is realized, it would be the second highest state yield on record.

United States rice production is expected to be 227 million hundredweight, down 2 percent from last year but up 13 percent from 2003.

Louisiana honey, valued at $2.1 million in 2004, can easily be found in grocery stores, farmers markets and health food stores, or it can be purchased directly from one of the state's 344 honey producers.

Honey is sweet, fat free and healthy to eat. It contains a wide array of vitamins, essential minerals, enzymes and amino acids.

According to apiarists, the flowers from which bees gather nectar determine the color and flavor of the honey produced. A hive of honeybees must tap some 200,000 flowers and travel more than 55,000 miles to gather enough nectar to produce just one pound of honey. In fact, one worker bee will make only a half teaspoon of honey in its lifetime.
